Marrakesh is really two cities standing side by side - the old town within its historic walls and the new town with its districts of Gueliz and l'Hivernage. The city covers a good deal of ground, and is ideal for exploring on foot, by bicycle or by barouche, the traditional Marrakchi way of getting from one place to another.

The Majorelle Garden, Arsat Moulay Abdessalam Park, the gardens of the Bahia Palace, and the Menara and Agdal orchards - each, in its own unique way, a haven of peace, relaxation, and pure delight! The city with a thousand years of history has seen 5 dynasties, each one leaving their indelible mark on its destiny.

It was founded in 1062 by the Almoravids, whose greatest legacy was to bring water to the city, harnessing spring waters through an ingenious system of wells and piping networks. We owe them the city's Palmeraie, its gardens and orchards, and the many other amenities that led to its development and influence. Under their rule, Marrakesh became the capital of Morocco.

The monuments included are indicated as information. In case of exceptional closure of one of the monuments, it will be replaced by another of equivalent level.
